

Nothing like a doll's house, a fully-equipped kitchen for when the children are peckish

The ultimate toy, a £150,000 playhouse

A SWISS billionaire has treated his two children to the ultimate present — this £150,000 Wendy playhouse which costs as much as a three-bedroom home.

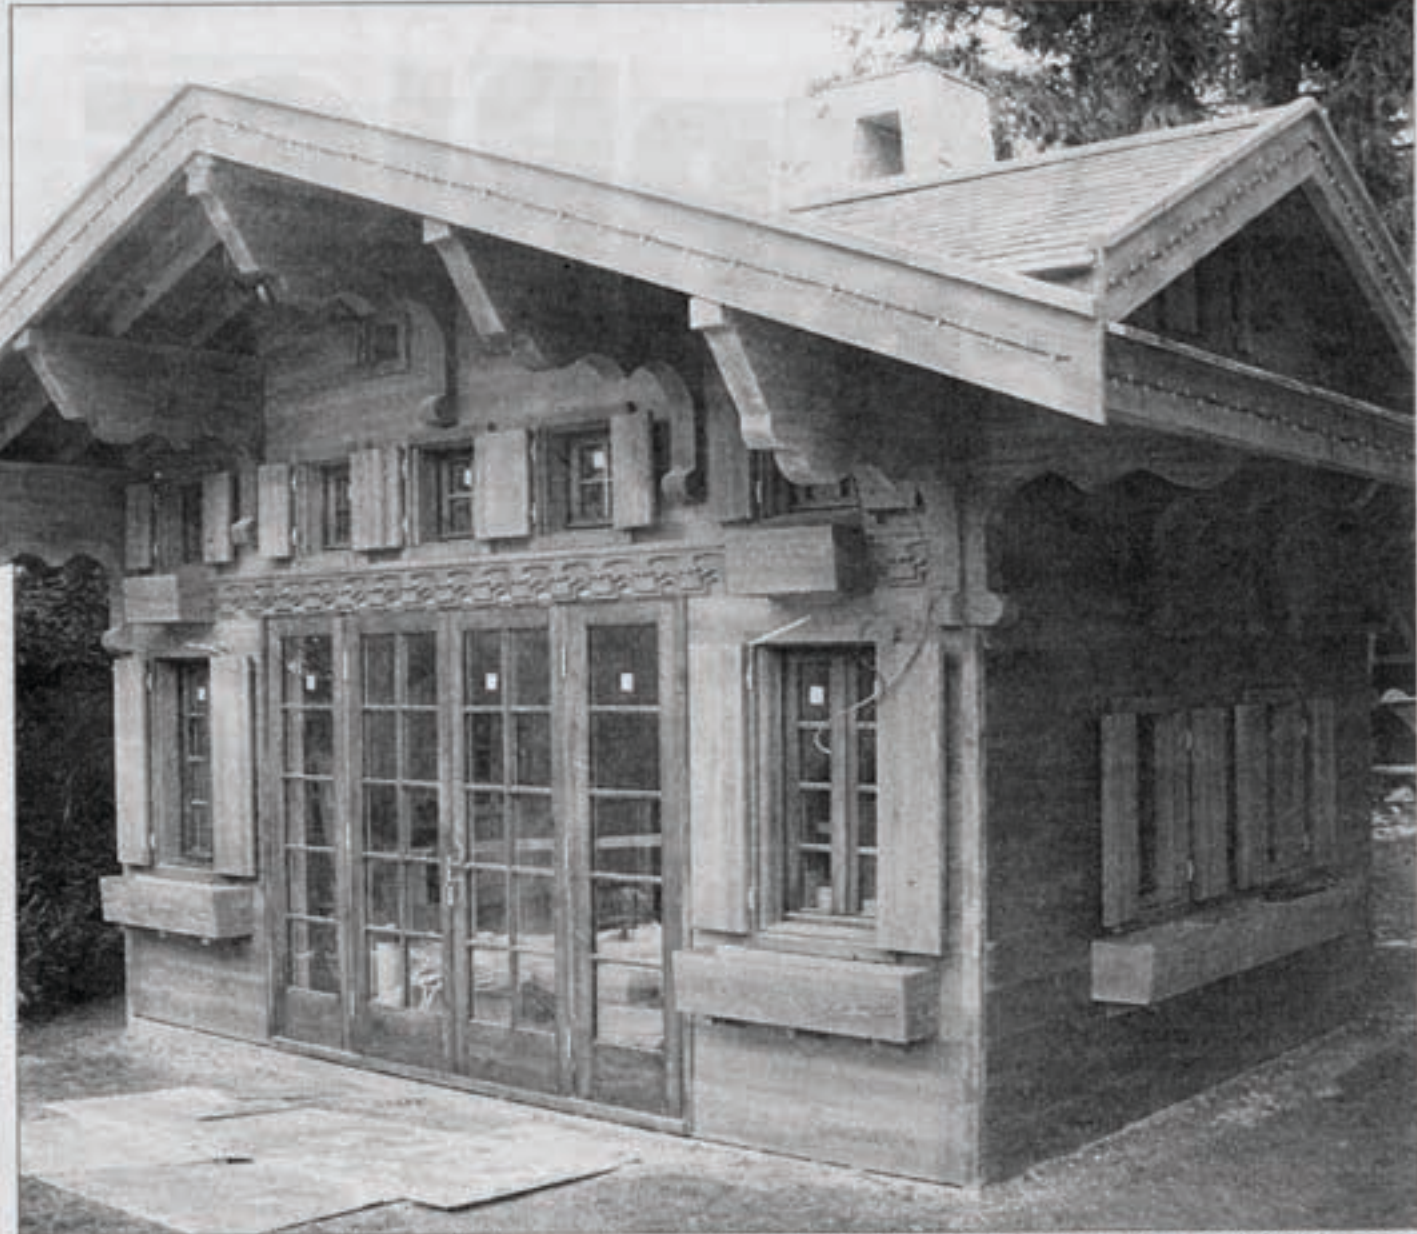

The two-storey fully equipped timber house is a replica of the family's magnificent chalet in the foothills of the Swiss Alps. It is 11ft 5in tall and measures 18ft 6ins by 14ft 9in and was built by a British company. It took 2,000 hours to build. A further £30,000-£50,000 was spent on transport and installation.

It has TV, four beds, a fitted kitchen and is equipped with double glazing, pine flooring and bespoke carved Swiss eaves. Over 400 decorative bulbs light it.

Russell Bowlby, owner of Flights of Fantasy, North Lynn, Norfolk, which built it, said: "We have insulated it and installed underfloor heating so the kids will be as warm as toast."

Just the place to play Heidi'n seek? The superior playhouse is a father's gift in the foothills of the Swiss Alps